The Australian and New Zealand Intensive Care Society (ANZICS) is the peak professional and advocacy body for medical practitioners specialising in the treatment and management of critically ill patients in public and private hospitals. ANZICS leads the world in intensive care research through its Clinical Trials Group and patient databases, including the Adult Patient Database, the Paediatric Intensive Care Registry and the Research Centre for Critical Care Resources.

The Society is devoted to all aspects of intensive care medical practice through ongoing professional education, the provision of leadership in medical settings, clinical research and analysis of critical care resources.

We seek to promote the interest of our patients, the professional development and interests of doctors who work in Intensive Care and clinical research in Intensive Care. Join today!

- Attend Regional, Bi-National and International educational and scientific meetings, with high standard plenary and scientific sessions featuring the best of Australian, New Zealand and international speakers – reduced registration rates available to members.
- Provide professional representation in the area of workforce and industrial development
- Benefit from peer group representations and submissions to the HIC, private hospitals, and health insurers over appropriate policies related to certification and remuneration.
- Utilise opportunities to develop research interests, develop protocols and pursue funding
- Share in and contribute to the professional profile and identity of intensive care specialists in the healthcare and broader communities.
- Help educate the community on specific intensive care issues
- Access software, central processing and reporting facilities for the provision of comparative reports on patient activity and acuity – for both adult and paediatric patients
- Contribute to and benefit from regular reports on intensive care workforce and infrastructure
- Access other members via email lists
